Q.45 I know it is a long way off, but thinking about the 2004 presidential elections, if the election for president were held today and the candidates were Republican George W. Bush and the Democratic nominee for President -- for whom would you vote -- Republican George W. Bush or the Democratic nominee for President?

Q.46 Now, looking ahead to next year and the years ahead, I want to read you statements about the budget and about issues the country may be addressing. After I read each one, please tell me whether the statement makes you feel much more positive, somewhat more positive, a little more positive, no more positive, or less likely about that individual.

46 (SPLIT G) A Democrat says we have a rising health care crisis. Patients and doctors are at the mercy of HMOs. Prescription drug prices drive seniors to the edge. Forty-two million Americans now have no health insurance. It's time to get serious. We should require health insurance with employment and give tax credits to help small businesses. We need a patients' bill of rights. And prescriptions should be covered under Medicare for all seniors. That's the responsible thing to do.

47 A Republican says high taxes and uncontrolled government spending are hurting our economy and taking money from people who could consume and invest. To get the economy going, we should make the Bush tax cuts permanent, dramatically reduce taxes on corporations and small businesses, give tax cuts to investors who lost money in the stock market, and pass tax reform to simplify our taxes and save billions in red tape.

We should cancel the tax cuts for the top one percent scheduled to take place years from now, which are holding us back. Instead, we should cut taxes now for low and middle income families. We should invest in school construction and homeland security, and extend unemployment benefits, which have barely kept up. We need to rebuild the confidence that makes our economy strong.

We should cancel the tax cut for the top one percent scheduled to take place years from now, and invest those funds in America: money to raise education standards, building new schools and enhancing homeland security, tax deductibility for college and job training, and prescription drug coverage for seniors. 51 (SPLIT G) A Republican says we must do the brave thing and reform Social Security so it can be there for future generations. We must preserve existing benefits for current retirees while giving younger workers the option of investing some of their Social Security funds in private accounts. 52 (SPLIT G) A Democrat says, we must protect Social Security for this generation and those to come. The government is draining the trust fund and using the money for other purposes. That should be against the law. Fiscal responsibility can extend the life of Social Security. Now, some want to privatize Social Security and link benefits to the stock market. That's a bad idea. Our policy should be to keep Social Security sound and to protect private pensions at the same time.

53 (SPLIT H) A Democrat says America should devote itself to achieving energy security. That begins with reducing our dependence on Middle East oil. With what is now happening, it's time to get serious. We should begin by acting boldly to make our cars, homes, and offices more efficient.
